What does a dress tell you about a century of history? The qipao (旗袍) originated in 1920s Shanghai as a symbol of modern Chinese womanhood, a fusion of Manchu tradition and Western tailoring at a moment when China was redefining itself. Today it remains one of the most recognized silhouettes in the world. The Pittsburgh Chinese Cultural Center's Qipao Team keeps this tradition alive in Pittsburgh, performing at cultural events throughout the year and welcoming members of all backgrounds. If you're in the Pittsburgh area and curious about Chinese cultural traditions, PCCC is worth knowing. Did you know paper cutting (剪纸) is over 1,500 years old and was designated a UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage in 2009?

What started as a folk art in rural China became one of the most recognized symbols of Chinese New Year. Every cut is deliberate. Fish for abundance, phoenixes for renewal, double happiness for marriage.

The Pittsburgh Chinese Cultural Center celebrates traditions like these through community workshops and cultural events throughout the year. Whether you grew up with these traditions or are discovering them for the first time, everyone has a seat at the table.

Music is the fastest way across a language barrier.

The PCCC Chorus performs a blend of traditional Chinese folk songs and contemporary pieces, bringing together heritage speakers, learners, and music lovers from across the Pittsburgh community. You don't need to speak Mandarin to feel it.

If you've ever been curious about Chinese culture but didn't know where to start, a live performance is the best first step. Check the PCCC event calendar for upcoming performances.
